Manager Selection and Portfolio Construction Process

The CMC Manager Selection and Portfolio Construction Process evaluates both individual manager skill and how well managers compliment each other to best achieve the investment objective. Diversification between managers is of paramount importance. Individual managers are evaluated on a variety of factors, including performance (absolute and risk-adjusted), style drift, stock selection skill and portfolio manager experience and talent. Managers are then paired together to determine how well they compliment each other. Manager combinations are analyzed as a complete portfolio and regularly monitored to ensure that investment guidelines are maintained. CMC believes that this process of individual manager and combined portfolio analysis provides the greatest probability that the portfolio will meet its investment objectives.
